IN REMEMBRANCE OF WORTHY YOUNG MAN

His Untimely Death Deplored By Many in His Former Far Eastern Home.

The Lewiston, Maine, Journal in a recent issue, printed the picture of the late Dr. A. F. Tewksbury, who died in this valley on January 8. It was accompanied by the following biography of the young man whose former home was in that city and which is reproduced for the benefit of the many friends made by Dr. Tewksbury during his residence here:

Dr. Alfred Foster Tewksbury, eldest son of Mrs. Alice J. Skolfield, of this city died at Phoenix, Arizona, on Jan. 8th of tuberculosis. He was born in Auburn, Maine, July 21, 1886. He attended the public schools here in Lewiston, also the Nichols Latin school. He was at one time, night operator at the telephone office. During his younger days, he delivered the Lewiston Journal, over the Pine Street route. After completing his course at the Latin school, he went to Lynn, Mass., where he was employed in the Electric Light works. He was transferred to Newark, N. J., where he was foreman in one of the departments. He was also in Denver, Colo., and Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he superintended the putting in of the electric light plant.

Leaving Albuquerque, he returned east and entered the University of Pennsylvania, for a course in dentistry, but owing to a throat trouble, was compelled to leave before completing his course. He went to Phoenix, Arizona, where he has lived for the past nine years.

He was of an unusual Christian character, a member of the Y. M. C. A., where he spent most of his spare time, and also a member of the Pine Street Congregational church. Besides his mother, he leaves a brother and sister, both younger, Herbert G. Tewksbury of Berlin, N. H. and Mrs. Fannie Tewksbury Heth, of this city. The news of the death of her brother, was kept from Mrs. Heth until after the last performance of the opera "Erminie."

ARRIVED FROM SAN FRANCISCO.—Mrs. Murray and Miss Katherine G. Murray, mother and sister of Mrs. W. R. Davenport, arrived in Phoenix Wednesday to remain for the winter.

missing for a sheep camp on Copper Creek since January 7, 1907; that is, about three weeks before the appearance of the advertisement. He had the sheep were afterward found, but gone south with a band of sheep and there was no trace of the missing man. It is known that the sheep were in the part of the country where the skeleton was found. Something over a year ago, a man who had been employed at the Relief mine on the Agua Fria left the camp. He had been off his mental balance for some time and it was feared that he would be lost on the desert. It was not known in what direction he had gone, but it was surmised that he had started toward Phoenix. Superintendent George Hamilton of the mine had sometime before given him a check in payment for his services and that check has never been presented anywhere. That man had light hair, of the same color as the fragments of hair on the skull of the skeleton.

Hank Berry, who found these remains, said that in one of the pockets there were samples of ore. The man who left the Relief had samples of the ore of that mine when he went away. It is possible that the ore found with the skeleton may be identified as Relief ore.

SIX KILLED IN COAL MINE.

Port Hood, N. S., Feb. 7.—Six coal miners and four loaders were crushed to death as the result of explosion in the Port Hood mine of the Port Hood Richmond Railway and Coal company. Whether the explosion was due to gas, fire damp or gunpowder remains to be determined by a coroner's jury.

With the exception of four Bulgarian laborers, all the victims were natives of this place, descendants of Highland Scotchmen, who settled at Cape Breton and all were well known. The scenes when the bodies were brought out were most distressing.

MURDER AND MUTILATION.

CONQUEST OF THE CANYON

Russell and Monett Nearing End of Perilous Trip

Great Preparation at Needles for the Reception of the Adventurers Today.

Needles, Cal. Feb. 7.—(Special).—Charles S. Russell and E. R. Monett, the miners who came all the way through the Grand Canyon in a sixteen foot row boat, reached Fort Mojave, twenty miles north of here today and after telephoning the authorities here of their near arrival, started on down the river. Great preparations have been made to give the adventurers a rousing welcome when they reach here. Russell telephoned that they might be expected to have in sight at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. A suite of rooms in "Reaction Hall" the railroad hotel, has been reserved for them, and a reception in their honor will be held tomorrow night.

Not since 1889, when Robert B. Stanton landed here after a successful flight of 752 miles against the river, has there been so much excitement in town. In his telephonic conversation with the correspondent of The Republican, Russell made the following statement: "The river below Bright Angel for 120 miles is so much worse than the worst places in the 420 miles above that there is no comparison. I have never seen Niagara, but if the Diamond Creek rapids are not as dangerous for a boat to live through, then Niagara must be more than water and rocks. After the damage to our boat in Hermit Creek rapid near Bright Angel trail, we did not dare to try to lower the boat through this fall. Monett managed to climb down along the side of the rapids, but I shot them. The boat capsized half way through, and I was unable to crawl out from underneath until we had been shot down into a big eddy; at the bottom Monett helped me to get the boat ashore and we found that she was all right.

"Monett carried all our exposed plates and thus saved our photographs. We shall reach Needles at 10 o'clock in the morning. The river is low in this flat country and we have had to push over sand bars half the time the last week. The end of the trip with about two days' supply of provisions is pretty close figuring."

Russell refused to divulge the success they had in the way of mineral in the second granite gorge, where it is generally supposed exists the richest ore in all the length of the canyon.

Starting September 20, from Green River, Utah, the men will have covered 72 miles in 141 days. If they reach here tomorrow, the last 432 miles from Bright Angel was made in 43 days.

PERNICIOUS PORKERS INCITED A ROW

Acosta, the Shoemaker, Discourses on the Virtues of Men and Things in General.

A row which had its origin in a couple of porkers that had infested the premises of John Maddox, culminated in the court of Justice Kyle yesterday and cost Maddox $15 to settle. Francisco Valenzuela and Maddox have ranches adjoining, located about four or five miles west of Phoenix. Day before yesterday Valenzuela's two sons saw Maddox in the act of chastising the two ubiquitous pigs with a large stick, and trying to drive them through a dividing fence, which was not altogether a pig proof.

Sisto Abadica, who is employed by Valenzuela, was immediately dispatched to the scene of hostilities on a mission of peace and to secure the possession of the shoats, which belonged to his employer. Sisto, an advance agent and scouting party, was received with unprintable epithets and an utter disregard for the flag of truce. However he brought home the bacon. Maddox still wrathily, followed and applied vituperation and invective to the whole Valenzuela family, further emphasizing and punctuating his remarks with a gun, which he flourished, threatening to blow off their heads. Valenzuela came to the city afterward, and on the warrant sworn out by him, Deputy Sheriff Wayne Davis went out and arrested Maddox. But for the mitigating features of the affair, the perniciousness of the porkers, Maddox might have been more heavily assessed.

Justice Kyle also had before him for the twelfth time, R. J. Acosta, the shoemaker, with a highly inflammable temper, who was brought into court by his employee, James Connelo, who charged that Acosta failed to pay him his wages and added abuse to his other offenses. Acosta testified in Spanish as to the fine qualities of Roosevelt, the governmental officers, territorial officials and the American citizen in general, but said that the Mexicans were "no heroes."
